

I see the job of the vice-president as being a back-up for the president and fulfill those duties when he is unable to attend a meeting, as well as being a participant at meetings called by the president. That appointment provides also an opportunity for the candidate to be groomed for the presidency if nominated and able to accept that honor.

Fernando G. Vescia